

Creating opportunity. Protecting the future it makes possible.

Push'N Sunshine honours Sunny, who helped children build futures beyond gang involvement, and Push, a young woman he supported who went on to attend an Ivy League university before losing her life to gang violence.

His commitment and her interrupted journey form the foundation of our movement: creating opportunity for young people, with the safety and support to keep moving forward.

OUR FOUNDING INSPIRATION

SUNNY

He built a culture of belonging.

Sunny knew the streets because he was part of them. He helped multiple children find a different path through guidance, practical support, and a culture of belonging.

Teaching Punjabi connected them to their identity, language, and roots. Boxing instilled discipline, self-control, and respect.

Those lessons instilled values they could carry into their lives: know who you are, take responsibility, and look out for one another.

He gave young people a foundation to grow from. His daily actions made those values real.

He put those values into practice every day.

For our founder, Sunny's commitment meant a three-hour daily round trip to school, helping keep education within reach and gang involvement at a distance.

That daily commitment was one example of the time and care he gave several children, helping them see and pursue a different future.

He also helped other children and families, providing groceries and looking out for people in the community.

Sunny passed away in 2022. His legacy lives through those he supported, including Push, whose journey is central to our mission.

THE LIFE THAT DEEPENED OUR MISSION

PUSH

She followed that path.
Her journey was cut short.

Push was one of the young people Sunny supported. She went on to attend an Ivy League university, showing how far that potential could take her.

She later lost her life to gang violence, cutting short the future she was building.

Her loss strengthened our purpose: opportunity must come with lasting safety and support.

Sunny helped open a path. Push's interrupted journey made protecting it part of our mission.

Together, their stories shape what we build.

Our goal is to carry Sunny's values forward while responding to the need Push's loss made clear:

Mentorship

Consistent guidance that encourages self-respect, responsibility, and care for others.

Education

Support to explore future options and connect with learning resources.

Community

Safe activities that build discipline, confidence, and a sense of belonging.

HELP BUILD PUSH'N SUNSHINE

A path forward, with support that continues.

Push'N Sunshine brings both legacies into one commitment: help young people build a future beyond gang involvement, with identity, discipline, belonging, and sustained support.

We are looking to connect with mentors, educators, and community partners who can help turn that commitment into practical programs.
